

DBE NEWSLETTER

FOR THE JUNE 10, 2016 NDDOT BID LETTING

REGISTER NOW - CIVIL RIGHTS COMPLIANCE SYSTEM - SUBCONTRACTORS, VENDORS, SUPPLIERS, MANUFACTURERS

After October 1, 2016, all bidders will be required to submit post-bid/pre-award, reports, and payment information through the Civil Rights Certification and Compliance System (CRCCS). After each bid opening, primes will identify all subcontractors, suppliers, vendors, and manufacturers and the dollar amounts intended for use on the project.

You are encouraged to set up a Civil Rights Certification and Compliance System (CRCCS) account and attend two vendor training webinars: "Introduction to the System" and "Contract Compliance Reporting" within the next month. Getting your firm into the system makes it easier for your primes to select your firm from the vendor list. If you're not in the system, the primes will need to enter your information. Please set up your account so your information is current and correct.

Be sure to use the Account Lookup Function! Do not set up duplicate accounts if you have already set one up. If you are currently certified as a DBE in North Dakota, you are already in the system and there is no need for you to set up an account. Instructions on how to access the account set up and get registered for training are included in the CRCCS Frequently Asked Questions located on the main Civil Rights Program Areas home page at <https://www.dot.nd.gov/divisions/civilrights/civilrights.htm> (<https://www.dot.nd.gov/divisions/civilrights/docs/dbe/CRCCSSystemFAQs10232015.pdf>)

In July, we'll host a series of webinars so that you can ask questions and work through system.

Construction No. 2 Industry For Hearing Loss, Study Says

A study spanning a decade and incorporating hearing tests of more than 1.4 million American workers found that construction accounted for the second-highest prevalence of workers with a hearing impairment.

Conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the “Hearing Impairment Among Noise-Exposed Workers” study estimated the prevalence of hearing loss at six levels using hearing tests performed between 2003 and 2012. The study expressed the impact of hearing loss on quality of life as annual disability-adjusted life years (DALYs).

The mining sector had the highest prevalence of workers with hearing impairment, followed by the construction and manufacturing sectors. Seventeen percent of mining workers whose hearing tests were included had one of the six levels of impairment, while 3 percent had moderate or worse impairment.

Construction was next with 16 percent of workers testing positive for any impairment and, like mining, 3 percent with moderate or worse.

Manufacturing rounds out the top 3 with 14 percent and 2 percent, respectively.

The CDC estimates that mining and construction workers lost 3.45 and 3.09 healthy years per 1,000 workers, respectively, due to their occupation.

The CDC notes that “current noise regulations do not require audiometric testing for construction workers. Without testing to identify workers losing their hearing, intervention might be delayed or might not occur.” Because of that, the CDC stresses the importance of proper hearing loss prevention through ear plugs and other methods of protection on construction sites.

“...Even mild-to-moderate impairment during working years can culminate in more healthy years lost during retirement,” the study explains. “Prevention also has short-term benefits; persons with even mild hearing loss experience reduced audibility (loudness), reduced dynamic range of hearing (the difference between the softest and loudest perceptible sounds), and increased listening fatigue. They also often experience difficulties understanding speech, especially in the presence of background noise. Other effects include degraded communication (2), cognitive decline, and depression.”

With approximately 22 million U.S. workers exposed to hazardous occupational noise, hearing loss is the third most common chronic physical condition in the U.S. and is the most common work related illness among American workers.
